The green little Shamrock of Ireland.

The following beautiful verses were written by the celebrated comedian CHERRY, and set to music by the famous Shield. It has received no small share of applause from the public since its introduction to Webster's Sans Souci in Philadelphia, by that inimitable and exquisite songster.

There's a dear little plant that grows in our isle,
'Twas St. Patrick himself sure that set it, And the sun on his labor with pleasure did smile,
And with dew from his eyes often wet it.
It thrives thro' the bog, thro' the brake, thro' the mire land,
And he calls it the dear little Shamrock of Ireland.
The sweet little Shamrock, the dear little Shamrock,
The sweet little, green little, Shamrock
of Ireland.

This dear little plant still grows in our land, Fresh and fair as the daughters of ENN, Whose smiles can bewitch, whose eyes can command,
In each climate that each shall appear in.
And shine thro' the bog, thro' the brake,
thro' the mireland,
Just like their own dear little shamrock
of Ireland.
The sweet little shamrock, &c.

This dear little plant that springs from our soil,
When its three little leaves are extended, Denotes from one stalk, we together should toil,
And ourselves by ourselves be befriended.
And still thro' the bog, thro' the brake,
thro' the mire land,
From one root should branch like the shamrock of Ireland,
The sweet little shamrock, &c.

The dear little plant that shoots from our earth,
And love in each heart find its own warm birth, While peace, joy, and plenty shall flourish
And bloom thro' the bog, thro' the brake,
thro' the mireland,
Just like my own, your dear little shamrock of Ireland,
Your own little shamrock, your dear little shamrock,
Oh! blessings attend on the sweet little, green little shamrock of Ireland.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

"Proofs of the corruption of gen. James Wilkinson and of his connection with Aaron Burr," &c.

But let us hasten to the development, which the general with "the honour of a soldier and the fidelity of a good citizen," tho' proper at length to make. If we before wanted conviction it waits us here. The nature of the communication he then received, the time at which he disclosed it, the manner of doing it, and the gross perjury and contradiction by which he has endeavored to conceal his connexion, incontestably prove it.

Let us first examine the nature of this communication. The following is Burr's letter, as decyphered by a member of the grand jury, at Richmond.

REAL.

YOUR letter post-marked 13th May, is received. I have at length obtained funds, and have actually commenced; the eastern (a) detachments, from different points, and

(a) In the copy sworn to be true, and afterwards sworn to be false, by gen. W. the word eastern is changed into expedition; and the stop taken from the word commenced, and placed after the word expedition, so as to read—"have actually commenced the expedition; detachments," &c. And in the general's sworn copies, for he has made two at a considerable distance of time, all the passages and words marked in this in roman were purposely omitted by the general, to avoid, as he says, giving a handle to his enemies.

Under different pretences will rendezvous on Ohio on 1st November. Every thing internal and external favors our view—naval protection of England is secured.— Truxon is going to Jamaica, to arrange with the admiral there, and will meet us at Mississippi; England—a navy of the United States ready to join, and final orders are given to my friends and followers. It will be an host of choice spirits. Wilkinson shall be second to Burr only, and Wilkinson shall dictate the rank & promotion of his officers. Burr will proceed westward 1st August, never to return; with him go his daughter and grandson. The husband will follow in October, with a corps of worthies. Send forthwith an intelligent and confidential friend, with whom Burr may confer; he shall return immediately with further interesting details; this is essential to concert and harmony of movement. Send a list of all persons known to Wilkinson, westward of the mountains, who could be useful, with a note delineating their character. By your messenger send me four or five of the commissions of your officers which you can borrow under any pretence you please; they shall be returned faithfully. Already (b) an order to the contractor to forward six months provisions to points you may name: this shall not be used until the last moment, and then under proper injunctions. Our project, (c) my dear friend, is brought to the point so long desired. I guarantee the result with my life and honor, with the lives, the honor and the fortunes of hundreds, the best blood of our country. Burr's plan of operation is, to move down rapidly from the falls on the 15th November, with the first 500 or 1000 men in light boats, now constructing for that purpose, to be at Natchez between the 5th and 15th December; there to meet you, there to determine whether it will be expedient in the first instance to seize or pass by Baton Rouge. On the receipt of this, send me an answer; draw on me for all expence. The people of the country which we are going to, are prepared to receive us; their agents now with me say, that if we will protect their religion, and will not subject them to a foreign power, that in three weeks all will be settled. The gods invite us to glory and fortune; it remains to be seen whether we deserve the boon. The bearer of this goes express to you, he will hand a formal letter of introduction from me. He is a man of inviolable honor and perfect discretion, formed to execute rather than project, yet capable of relating facts with fidelity, and incapable of deception. He is thoroughly informed of the plans and intentions of —, and will disclose to you as far as you enquire, and no further. He has imbibed a reverence for your character, and may be embarrassed in your presence; put him at ease, and he will satisfy you.

22d July.

Doctor Bollman, equally confidential better informed on the subject, and more enlightened will hand this duplicate.

29th July.

Can any man read this letter, and say that he thinks the person to whom it was addressed had no previous knowledge of the plan? Without such previous knowledge the letter itself must have been unintelligible. Nor can it be considered as a proposal to seduce the general from his allegiance because the disclosure which it makes is not of the plan, but of the means to effect it. Every thing relative to the project is spoken of as resting already in the knowledge of his correspondent; and it mentions only such details as were necessary still to be arranged, in order to ensure its success. Examine it more in detail. It begins with acknowledging the receipt of a letter, post marked 13th May, and then immediately enters on the business—"I have at length obtained funds and have already commenced." Funds for what?
What is commenced? These would be the natural exclamations of a person who had been, as the general pretends he was, totally in the dark as to his correspondent's plans. From the wording of this letter it is not plain, that the want of funds had been

(b) "Already an order to the contractor," &c.—this is changed in the sworn copy to —"already are orders to the contractor given"—this is somewhat obscure. If they were already given; how could he say in the same sentence—"this shall not be used, until the last moment." It appears to me that already is, by mistake in the cypher, used instead of have ready. The omission of the word given, in the original, and the substitution of are for an, which W. has adroitly supplied in the sworn copy, favors this conjecture. It is, however, only given as one.
But it would then read—"have ready an order to the contractor, &c. which appears a more probable reading."

(c) "Our project my dear friend, is, in the copy reduced to "the project." the subject of former communication, and that the operations which were commenced related to an undertaking formerly agreed upon between them. The Eastern detachments are to rendezvous on the Ohio the 1st of November, to move down rapidly on the 15th, and to be at Natchez between the 5th and 15th December, to meet Wilkinson there, and then to determine—what? whether Wilkinson will join? whether he will; after he knows the plan, approve of it? whether he will a second time turn traitor to his country, and apply those arms to her destruction, which were entrusted to him for her defence? No; all this is previously arranged. The only point to determine, after the junction, is whether it will be better to take Baton Rouge, or to pass it by.

The eastern detachment is to proceed under Burr. Where is the western? Under Wilkinson, under the very man who dares now to claim our admiration and gratitude for defeating this very scheme which he himself had planned. Again "Our project, my dear friend is brought to the point long desired." But I waste my time in comments on this document. Those who are not convinced, by a bare perusal that this the language of one accomplice to another, will never yield to any reasoning. Add to them the two letters received at the same time from Mr. Dayton, (See Notes 79, 80) and no doubt will remain, that the commander in chief of the American army, if not the father of the project, was at least as deeply engaged in it as any of the others.

From the North-American.

OUR AFFAIRS WITH FRANCE.

With all the abject endeavors to wheedle and fawn upon Bonaparte, in order to obtain a respite of his injustice and insults, General Armstrong has found it impossible any longer to keep up appearances, tho' at the expence of the dignity and honor of the nation. The accounts received at Naples, of his having obtained his passports to quit France, founded on letters from Paris, dated about the 28th of July, are strengthened by the dates brought to New-York by the Oliver Elsworth. The reader will find, that on the 8th of August, the London papers state, that the French government had then lately repeated the intimation to our minister, that we must soon take our choice to go to war for France or against her.— There is therefore little doubt that this is the true state of the relations between the two countries, notwithstanding the electioneering falsehoods, which like those of last fall, are propagated to deceive the people and influence their votes. The faction which is striving to force Maryland back again into the toils of democracy and Buonaparte, have propagated the assertion that Armstrong was negotiating a treaty and was proceeding with favorable prospects of success, at the very time that France was repeating her menaces against our independence by ordering us to go to war. The truth must have been known at Washington, and hence we can account for the high tone with which the National Intelligencer, the Virginia papers, the Aurora, the Whig and others patronized by the administration and its tools, utter lying invectives against England, and call for decisive steps against her. It is the desire of those, who set them a-going, to comply with Bonaparte's commands by joining him in the war. If the Gallican party can only obtain a faint approbation of the people, they mean this winter to pass the Rubicon; they mean to plunge the country into all the horrors of a devastating and interminable war, not for American interest, but to extend the glory of an European tyrant. It is meant to sacrifice the independence of this nation, to the fell gratification of party success. Embargoes have been tried, and laid aside.— They will not be recurred to. They exercise too long the patience of the people;— they form a means of pacifying Bonaparte, which is not bold enough. When they gall too much, they may be removed like a blister plaister. But if a war can be produced the object is irrevocably accomplished at one stroke. A nation, when it goes to war cannot when it pleases command a return of peace. It must continue the conflict as long as may suit the enemy; and its rulers will gain such an increase of power and act by so many irregular means, which will be palliated by alledging the necessity of the case, that they may safely pass by even an advantageous opening for an accommodation. Mr. Jefferson found this practicable even when we were at peace. How much more will it be the case, when we become the allies of Bonaparte, aided by the engineers and protected by the cannon promised in his name by one of the government papers at Washington. To pursue the true course marked out by national honor and interest will be more impracticable, because fewer men will be found firm enough to lift up their voice in the name of liberty & their country against the persecution of a predominant French faction. Already the opposers of Bonaparte's insolence are called tories; they will thereafter be denominated traitors, and perhaps punished in that summary mode, which too many of their misguided adversaries, believe ought to supercede the "snails pace of law." The press es will be silenced or intimidated: nothing will be uttered from them but the praises of domestic patricides, and the guileless oppressions of a foreign metropolis.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.

A ship arrived at Duxbury on Tuesday last, which left Liverpool August 15; but brought neither letters nor papers.
Extract of a letter from a celebrated Physician in Marseilles, dated in May, to his friend in Cambridge.

"Poor Charles the IVth, formerly king of Spain, is still here; with feet, legs, knees and hands swelled by a gouty and rheumatical affection. He has with him a Spanish gentleman of the faculty, but he has called for my opinion, and I have paid him a few visits."

SPAIN—Blake's Defeat.—In consequence of that disgraceful occurrence, the supreme junta of Seville issued the following address:

The supreme board has read, with no less indignation than grief, this true and melancholy relation. It fondly hoped that an army so well provided and conducted, would by driving the enemy from Arragon and gathering fresh strength in its victorious progress, prove one of the main anchors of the state. One unfortunate moment has blasted these hopes for the present; and altho' it ought to be sure to find, at all times, in the loyalty and enthusiasm of the nation, abundant means to make up the loss sustained, the reputation and honor of our arms tarnished by a dispersion as disgraceful as inconceivable, are not to be restored in the same manner.

And, indeed, what is it to be ascribed to?
To a want of confidence in the chief? The worthy general, who commanded these troops, celebrated for his gallantry, had promised them fresh triumphs. To fear? And of whom? Of an enemy whom they had gloriously conquered but a short time before. Perchance to treachery? It is horrid to say so, and impossible to credit it. In short to pique, ill will or envy? Oh! unhappy men! your country is in danger, and you can think of your miserable petty quarrels and puerile pretensions, and abandon her in that perilous situation? Lay then the Spanish name aside; put on the French uniform; disgrace yourselves by the adoption of the French badge, and tear your own country's bosom to pieces.

O ye, who in prosperous as in adverse circumstances, have shewn yourselves worthy the name by which we are distinguished of the cause which we defend! Andalusians, who at Baylen succeeded in humbling the French eagles to the dust; Galicians, who so boldly raised the standard of Freedom when the world thought you subdued forever and who know no better days than those on which you can overtake the enemy to attack and destroy him; Asturians who maintain, wherever you happen to fight, your ancient and venerable character; Castilians, Estremadurians, who in the fields of Cabezon, Riosco and Medel-lin, compelled Fame to confer upon you the prize of valor, although Fortune would not deck your brows with the laurels of victory; Catalonians, who notwithstanding the occupation of your frontiers and your fortresses, incessantly harass your treacherous oppressors; Valencians who so gloriously defended your walls in the preceding campaign; valiant Arragonese, heroic Saragossians; august pattern of loyalty and constancy, who were on the point of seeing your fetters broken, and of raising your head bending under the yoke! come ye all to this field of battle, come and pass sentence upon that unheard of flight! Tell them, that the Chieftain and the generals who commanded them, although left alone, were escorted by their honor their virtue, and the esteem and confidence of their country of which they never were unworthy; but they who so vilely abandoned them, who ran away in so dastardly a manner, let the cause of their flight have been what it will, they are the objects of the execration of all good citizens, and the disgrace of the Spanish name; in short, they deserve the exemplary and most just punishment which government will inflict upon them, wherever they can be found.

In Montgomery county there was no op- position to the Federal ticket: Messrs. Worthington & Bland are elect- ed delegates to the Assembly from Bal- timore city, and Wm. Merryman Sheriff of the city and county. The four old delegates from Baltimore county have been re-elect- ed.

Many of the democratic prints openly re- joice in the victories of Napoleon, and ex- ult in the misfortunes of those powers of the continent of Europe, who have prefer- red self government to an unconditional submission; who revolting against a system of tyranny, which has had no example in modern days, wisely and magnanimously have determined on the only course, which promised a deliverance from the Corsican yoke. One would imagine that our feelings would be in sympathy with the principles of our constitution, the theory of which, con- taining the purest elements of freedom, ought, we should suppose, to inspire an in- vincible detestation of tyranny, and as far as our good wishes could extend, make the cause of every oppressed nation, that of our own. But strange as it may appear, such are not the sentiments and wishes of a very large proportion, who are sorry to say, of persons who at present have the most in- fluence in the councils of the nation.

These sources of those unnatural senti- ments may be traced without difficulty; they were pointed out by Washington; for- eign prejudices and foreign attachments, are the sources from whence spring those sentiments which would otherwise astonish, as they must afflict every real friend of ra- tional liberty, and national independence, without which freedom cannot exist. The history of the world teaches us, that in the independence of each state, consists the hap- piness of all; nations then form one great commonwealth, in which the cause of one is the cause of all. When one great power gives law to all, as this cannot be done but by force, despotism is the unavoidable con- sequence. The views of the French emper- or are no longer concealed, they are openly avowed by his actions; they are no longer subjects of conjecture or speculation, sic vo- lo, sic jubeo, is the principle enforced at the point of the bayonet. It is true that our ter- ritory has not been invaded, but if any judg- ment can be formed of what would be done, by what is done, we have no reason to be- lieve that we would be exempt from the grasp, in which nearly all Europe is held. The power of Napoleon to assail us is limit- ed by a cause, which neither him nor us can control, and in which neither his forbear- ance nor our means of resistance has any agency. In support of what we have advanc- ed, as relates to the party calling itself re- publican, we will before we pass to another view of the subject, select a recent article from a paper which we understand is the leading democratic paper in New York; it was written as a comment upon the first ac- count of the news of the defeat of the French in Spain.

"Rejoicing among Tories.—The Tories and British agents who attend the coffee- house, were in high spirits yesterday in con- sequence of a report that the VAGABOND BANDITTI, in the employment of the Span- ish inquisition, had defeated the French army near Madrid."

Vagabond banditti! What an epithet to apply to men, fighting for a cause, in justice not inferior to our own! Scandalous pro- stitution of a free press! The basest and most servile journal in France, would dis- tain to insert so mean and detestable an ar- ticle.

If a large portion of our country is lost to every sentiment of freedom and patriotism, it is surprising that a regard for the interests of the country has no weight, when opposed to foreign prejudices and attachments. The democrats, if we are to trust their de- clarations, are the champions of our com- mercial rights. Although the Sun in his meridian splendor is not more exposed to our view than the position is clear, that as the nations of Europe are freed from the yoke of Napoleon, so does our commerce with those countries become free and unshackled. Look at our commerce with Spain and Por- tugal, and all their extensive colonies!

When our vessels arrive in their ports, we hear of no confiscations under the Berlin, Milan, and Bayonne decrees. We exchange our cargoes and depart in safety. If Hol- land—if Germany—if Italy could break the Corsican yoke, the same freedom of com- merce would exist with those countries, and yet there are men in our country, who tell us that the emperor Napoleon is fight- ing for the liberty of the seas, and for our rights! To reason with persons under such influences were little short of madness; we shall close this article by two quotations from a leading Boston democratic paper.

From the Boston Chronicle of August 10 1809.

"Let the revilers of Bonaparte reason up- on his pacific conduct towards us, and ren- der unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

From the same the 14th ult.

"It cannot be denied by any reasonable man that Bonaparte has discovered a pacific disposition towards us. His conduct has been marked with magnanimity!"

[Norfolk Ledger.]

The governor of Gerona has sent to the supreme board the following statement, which contains some important particulars of the heroic defence of that fortress against the furious attacks of a most obstinate enemy.

"SIR, "I think it my duty to lay before your majesty a short account of the siege & bom- bardment of this heroic city, with the gov- ernment of which your majesty has been pleased to invest me.

"But, as the details of these facts, and the documents in support of them, would be too voluminous; and as time is at present, so valuable to your majesty on account of your important occupations, and to me on account of the active situation in which I am placed, I will now confine myself to giv- ing your majesty a slight proof of the senti- ments with which I am animated, and the state of the fortress.

"The latter has been besieged these 70 days, of which 48 of open trenches and 38 of unremitted bombardment; and, in the castle of Monjuich which completely com- mands it within a very short distance, and is its principal defence, there has been, for these thirteen days, a breach through which may pass 30 men abreast. During this time the enemy have thrown into the place 10,000 shells or grenades; and the result of all their fury is to burn the houses to ashes, but, by no means to damp the spirit of its inhabitants, who, every day fly to arms, wherever wanted, with increased enthusiasm and attachment to the just cause which we are defending.

"The garrison, though very weak, since it scarcely consists of 2500 effective men, has performed prodigies of valor; and, in three sorties and two attacks, (one of which was three times repeated by the enemy on the breach itself, and repelled with unspeak- able bravery) has made them perfectly sen- sible of the order and gallantry with which the Spaniards fight. But all these particu- lars must undoubtedly have come to your majesty's knowledge through the channel of the commander in chief of this army, whom I have from time to time, informed of whatever has occurred.

"Your majesty, whose paternal exertions are invariably directed to the preservation of the national honor, is aware how well all the inhabitants of this place have deserved of their country. Never, sir, have I seen their admirable enthusiasm in the least abat- ed; and a thousand times would they have sallied forth and courted a glorious death in the field had not their small numbers ren- dered it necessary to repress their ardor.

"In so critical a situation, I have repeat- edly applied to the marquis de Coupigny, second in command of this army, for a rein- forcement of at least 2,000 men, upon the ground that, even if granted the garrison would hardly have one half of its compli- ment; but nothing has been done as yet, al- though my demands have been more press- ing as circumstances are becoming more ur- gent.

"The whole of which I think myself bound to lay before your majesty, with the solemn assurance, that this interesting bul- wark of Catalonia shall hold to the last, and sacrifice itself for our adored monarch Fer- dinand VII. whom may God preserve! re- calling to men's minds the fate of Numantia and Saguntum, rather than to submit to the tyrants yoke.

"For my part I promised at the head of my brave Spaniards; and I now renew my promise at the foot of Y. M.'s throne, Y. M. that the enemy shall not enter this for- tress but over my dead body. The annex- ed proclamation will make Y. M. better ac- quainted with the sentiments with which I am animated."

(Signed)
"MARIANO ALVEREZ." Gerona, July 16, 1809.

* This proclamation bears date the first of April when the enemy were already threat- ening the fortress, and concludes with de- creeing the punishment of death on the spot, against any one, without distinction of class, rank or condition, that shall have the baseness to utter the words, surrender or capitulation

Twenty Dollars Reward.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, living in Brenttown, Fauquier county, Va. on Monday the 4th of September, a mulatto fellow named DAVID, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, about 25 years of age, has a cut or mark from the corner of one of his eyes, occasioned by the kick of a horse—he is a good waggoner and has been accustomed to work on a plantation.

He took with him one new outside jacket, of country cloth, black and white stripe and breeches of the same; several under jackets, among which was one Bennet's cord; he is a very dressy, artful fellow, and will endeavor to pass as a free man, and change his dress; he frequently calls himself David Murphy.— I will give the above reward, with all reason- able charges, to any person that will bring him home, or lodge him in any jail so that I get him again.
